Notes for John Locke:

Baptised in London, England, Sep 16, 1627. Killed by Indians Aug 26, 1696. According to "History and Genalogy of Captain John Locke" by author Arthur H. Locke, The Rumford Press, Concord, New Hampshire, 1916, reprinted 1993 by Heritage Press, p. 1, John is very likely Thomas Locke's son, based upon information in the London White Chapel Register. Thomas had two sons, John and Nathaniel, who were baptised in London and it is very likely that they are the two Lockes of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. There is no record of the arrival of John and Nathaniel. Elizabeth and John lived for a time in Portsmouth, though he probably settled on this land in 1666 without permission of the town. Later, they settled on Jocelyn's Neck (now known as Locke's Neck), which is now Rye, NH.

From same publication, p. 6,7: "He (John) was noted for his daring and success with which he fought the Indians, foiling their many attempts to destroy the settlers, hence was correspondingly hated by them. On one of their raids from the east, landing on the coast near Locke's Neck, they concealed their canoes in the bushes and went inland to surprise their intended victims. Locke discovered the canoes and cut generous slashed in them where the cuts were not seen at first glance. The Indians returning from their murderous expedition, pushed off only to find themselves sinking, thereby losing nearly all their plunder, stones, and arms and making it necessary for them to escape overland, suffering many hardships and losing some of their band. Later a party of eight came from the easward for the express of killing Locke and, surprising him as he was reaping grain in his field, mortally wounded him with his own gun, which he had left against a rock at some distance away. They then returned without doing further damage. One account says that when the Indians ran up to scalp Locke, the latter had strength enough left to cut off the nose of one with the sickle he had been using. All this was wittnessed by one of his sons who had secreted himself in the grain."

Taken from "The Pioneers of Maine and New Hampshire, 1623-1660" (p. 129)

"Locke, John, carpenter, Portsmouth, hd grant of house lot in 1656. With wife Elizabeth he sold house and land to James Drewe, mariner, 23 March 1660-1. Rem. to Hampton about 1666. He m. 1652 Elizabeth, daughter of William Berry. [Hist. Hamp.] Children, John, Elizabeth, Nathaniel, Alice, Edward, Trifene, Rebecca, Mary, William b. April 17, 1677, James, Joseph. He was killed by the Indians Aug. 26, 1696. Estate settled 1708."

From the "Genealogical Guide to the Early Settlers of America, 1600's-1800's" [p. 329]

"Locke, John, Dover, 1645, removed to Hampton, married about 1652, Eliz., daughter of William Berry, had John, Eliz., Nathaniel, born 1661; Alice, Edward, Tryphena, Rebecca, Mary, William, 1677; James and Joseph, was killed the the Indians 1696." Also, [p. 151] "John came from Yorkshire, Eng., settled at Dover, NH, 1644; became a resident of Hampton, NH, 1655,"

Notes for James Locke:
Note: From Locke, p. 25: :One Adams is called the first settler of Barnstead, the reason being that he settled in the southern part, while James Locke settled in the remote northeast part a few years before. James served under Gen. Wolf at Quebec in 1759, and returning to his home in Rochester, again took up his routine of farming and hunting. On one of these trips he fell in with a hunter named Libbey, who lived on what is now New Durham Ridge. Libbey wanted a neighbor , even though he be five miles away, and showed Locke a clearing where Indians had apparently camped. This seemed a desirable location, as it was within a mile of a large tract of marsh land, and its hay would winter several cattle. Here he built his cabin and to it moved his family from Rochester about 1762...Loce and Libbey worked the marsh together, cutting and stacking the grass to be drawn in the winter on sleds by the elders or their sons. Moose fed on these stacks, and one winter three were shot. Indians also slept there but did no damage. James died on the home place about 1805, and was buried there."

Notes for Simeon Locke:
He lost an eye while working when he was young when shoeing an oxen, having to turn the oxen on its side and it (the ox) throwing its head (and horns) back. At the close of the Revolutionary War he moved from Epsom

(1783) settling in a clearing located about 1/2 mile west of the Sherburne Road in the north part of town. A few years later he bought and moved upon the farm on the top of Locke's Hill, and was joined there by his brother David, who settled on the next farm south, and in 1800 by his brother Levi, settling the next farm north. Simeon moved to the interval at East Concord in 1818.

It should be noted: Locke (History and Genealogy of Captain John Locke, p. 53) and Parson's (History of Rye, p. 490) show Reuben to the son of Reuben Philbrick's first wife, Hannah Locke Philbrick, not the second wife, Mary Marston. However, the Rye, NH VR's has Reuben as the son of the Deacon's second wife. If he were the son of Hannah Locke Philbrick, then she would have been approximately 35 years of age at the birth of her only child. Her marriage and death date are not known.

Locke November 18, 1852 in Unk Location, daughter of Josiah Locke and Lydia Philbrick. She was born Unknown in Unk, and died Unknown in Unk.

Notes for George Oliver Locke:
 From the Merrimack and Sullivan Counties, New Hampshire: Biographical Review, Vol. 22:
 "Simeon Locke (first), grandfather of the subject of this sketch, followed farming in Epsom for a time. Later he moved to East Concord, N.H. and there spent the rest of his life. His habits of thrift and industry enabled him to acquire considerable property. In politics he voted with the Democratic party, but his retiring disposition would not permit him to take any active part in public affairs. He attended the Congregational Church. At his death he was seventy-nine years old. He married Abigail Blake, of Epsom, who attained the age of seventy-three, and was the mother of nine children. Of these the third, Simeon Locke (second), was born in East Concord. He settled in South New Market, and there followed his calling of mechanic for the rest of his active period. He was an able business man as well as a good mechanic, and by making proper use of his opportunities he realized excellent financial results. He was a Democrat in politics, and long occupied a prominent position in public affairs in South New Market. Simeon Locke (second) reached the venerable age of ninety-two years. He was a Deacon of the Methodist Church. He wife, Clariss, who was a native of South New Market, became the mother of thirteen children, of whom Lydia A., Sarah, Simeon, Samuel, and George Oliver, are living. Mrs. Clarissa Locke died at the age of seventy-two years.
 "George Oliver Locke was educated in his native town. After leaving school he went to Exeter, N.H., where he served an apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade. He subsequently followed his trade in Andover and Lawrence, Mass., and for many years in Pembroke. He worked at the anvil and forge for fifty years in all. In that period he saved a comfortable competency, which enabled him to retire some time since. He is now enoying the fruits of his industry. He owns and cultivates a farm of forty acres.

"On November 18, 1852, Mr. Locke married Harriet T. Locke, daughter of Josiah Locke, of East Concord. Mrs. Locke is the mother of two children, Josephine S. and Sarah A. Josephine S. was born November 9, 1857, and is now the wife of Ira B. Moore, of Rochester, N.H. Sarah A., born June 25, 1861, is the wife of A. R. Clough, of Dover, N.H., having one daughter, Sadie. Mr. Locke is an earnest supporter of the Republican party, and has been a leading spirit in public affairs. He served as Tax Collector and Highway Agent for a number of terms, and during the years 1865 and 1866 he represented this town in the legislature. He is connected with Howard Lodge, I.O.O.F., of Suncook, and with the grange in Pembroke. Both he and Mrs. Locke are member of the Methodist Episcopal church."
