Notes for JEFFERSON JOSEPH TERRY:

Jefferson Joseph Terry left home in 1863 at the young age of 16 to join his brother, Joseph Sterling Terry in the Confederate Army, as a bugle boy, saying he was 18 years old. He was signed up and placed in Company "B", Perkins Battalion Infantry Regiment C.L.A. someplace in Missouri. The state was divided, part were for the North and part were for the South. When the war ended he was in Mississippi and there he married Phoebe Nolan, a widow, her husband having been killed in the first part of the war. Phoebe and her daughter, Ada Nolan lived in Redwood, MS. There she and Jefferson's first child, Robert Bea Terry was born, then a daughter, Maud Moore Terry was born. Phoebe died in 1881. Jefferson left Redwood, MS soon after her death to arrange with his parents to care for the children. He returned about three years later and took Bea and Maud to his parents in Moberly, Randolph Co., Missouri. Ada Nolan remained in Redwood, Mississippi. Bea and Maud Terry stayed in Missouri with their grandparents and Jefferson left for Indian Territory, OK. The children remained in Missouri until 1890 when Jefferson returned and took them to Indian Territory, OK. Jefferson had remarried to Dora Payton, a widow with 5 children, 4 of whom died of diphtheria. Dora ran a rooming house and Jefferson had a livery stable. From this union Beulah and Joe were born in 1892 and 1894. Dora died soon after Joe's birth. About 1898 he married Josephine Gardner, part Choctaw Indian, from Oklahoma. Their children were Arthur, Louis, Agnes and Myrtle Lee Marie Terry. Jefferson Joseph Terry became a U.S. Marshal in Indian Territory, OK, where he also owned and operated a livery stable. All his children grew up in a community some two miles north of what is now Hugo, OK.

Jefferson Joseph Terry served in the Confederate Army, it was also rumored that he rode with Quantrill of Missouri. He was a school teacher as a young man, owned a boarding house and livery stable, was a U. S. Marshal and a farmer. He worked with his son-in-law Samuel Bailey Spring to survey and sell lots in Hugo. All of his children had much love and respect for him, and affectionally addressed him as PaPa or "Mr. Terry"

Notes for JIMMY LEE MORGAN:
CIVIC ISSUES INSPIRED SERVICE, POTENT PEN

When something was on Jim Lee Morgan's mind, he never hesitated to pick up a pen and let the editor of the newspaper know all about it.

His frequent missives were sprinkled with exclamation points when he got his dander up about topics as diverse as where the Razorbacks should play - "I would like the people of Little Rock to urge UALR to develop a football program and to fill the coliseum in the future!" -to the vagaries of the IRS---"I can testify to both the lack of good computer use and the insouciance of the IRS in dealing with both their masters (we the public) and their managers (our elected leaders)."

The blunt, lucid language was typical of a man who had moved easily between the academic, political and military arenas during a life that took him to military bases in Germany, stars' homes in Beverly Hills and back again to Little Rock.

Morgan died Monday at the age of 57. He suffered from peripheral neuropathy, his father said, which eventually confined him to a walker and made it difficult for him to live alone. But Morgan's medical troubles didn't affect his intensity or his competitive streak, his father said.

"We must have played 1,000 games of gin rummy," James C. Morgan said of his son. "And the last eight games we played, he won six of them. Which is unusual - even he said so - because I'll bet you there is usually not ten games difference between the games we have won and lost."

As a child, Morgan was a formidable contender. Although his eye-sight in one eye was terrible, forcing him to wear bifocals at the age of 12, he still hit 18 home runs in the 18 games played by his Amarillo, Texas, softball team.

The child of military parents and himself a future Air Force Captain, Morgan moved around for much of his early life, attending five different German schools during the first grade. Eventually, he landed at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, his father's old stomping grounds. There he served as vice president of the student senate, rubbing elbows with well-known Arkansas political figures like Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty, former chief of staff for President Clinton, and former Gov. Jim Guy Tucker. After college, it was Los Angeles - not Washington, D.C., or Little Rock - where Morgan landed. As executive assistant to the mayor of Beverly Hills, he toiled on the same kinds of problems that mayor's offices everywhere deal with - sewer hookups, garbage collection, persuading voters in approve city-issued bonds.

During his California years, Morgan was something of a civic activist, his father said, serving on a committee that advised then Gov. Jerry Brown about the future of the state's university system, teaching courses on business law and economics and working to establish a senior citizens center in Simi Valley.

He stopped only when his health gave out. His father drove halfway across the country to bring Morgan back to Little Rock. Home again, he volunteered with hospice care, counseling people close to death, but his own health was failing and though his apartment was equipped with banisters and hand-holds, he had to live at times at home with his family.

"This guy was sharp," his father said. "He was somebody who could pull people together. He was very intense in his work - whatever he was doing, that's what he was focused on."

Arkansas Democrat Gazette newspaper, July 25, 2000
